About this Job Match

This Specific Job Match analysis has been compiled in Recruitment Mode, and is suitable for matching the candidate's behavioral style against a role different from that which they currently fill.

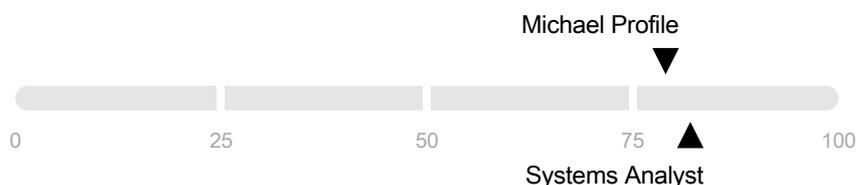

Job Requirements 1

Close Matches

These are elements of the Systems Analyst role where Michael's personal style seems to match the job's requirements relatively closely. According to his profile, Michael's personality would seem to be well suited to these aspects of the job.

Note: these Close Matches are based on individual factors, and combinations of factors, within the profiles.

Order and Discipline

Systems Analyst is a role in which adherence to established structures, guidelines or regulations is of significant importance. A successful candidate, then, must be willing to conform to these requirements rather than following their own instincts or pursuing independent goals.

In terms of organization and structure, Michael's profile suggests that he matches the role's needs closely. He prefers to work within well established parameters, with an analytical and problem-solving approach and a willingness to work within clear guidelines.

Recruitment Mode

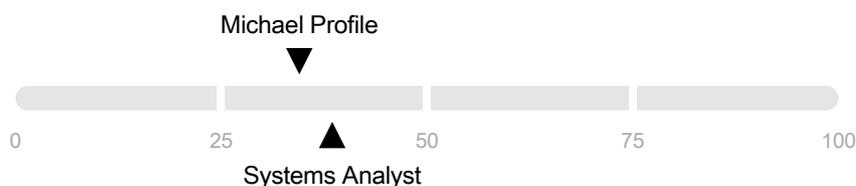

This is a match analysis made in Recruitment Mode, meaning that it is based on Michael's likely behaviors in a new role. These behaviors may not necessarily be evident in Michael's current role.

Behavioral Questions

Aspects of Michael's analytical approach may demonstrate themselves within a personal discussion. Examples might include clarifying particular questions, or being sure to provide detailed responses and explanations.

Relevant personal experiences for a role like this will be those in which Michael was required to fit in with closely defined protocols or guidelines, whether in an organizational sense, or in a more technical or procedural manner, in order to successfully achieve a goal.

Care and Consideration

The role of Systems Analyst is one in which the ability to think ahead is important. A capacity to carefully consider possible outcomes, or take time to understand implications, is a significant responsibility for a Systems Analyst.

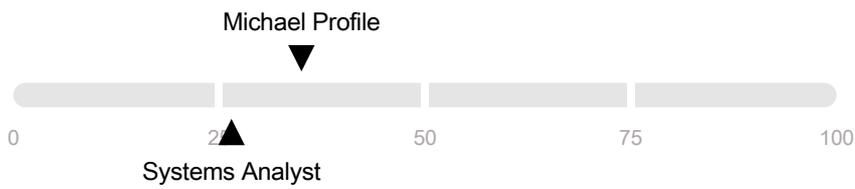

Michael has the kind of thoughtful and considerate style that should match the needs of a Systems Analyst well, with a tendency to give consideration to his actions and weigh his decisions carefully.

Behavioral Questions

Because of the planning aspect of this role, it will be useful to investigate Michael's experiences in this area, particularly his personal approach to the need for planning work, as well as any related experiences he may have.

Michael's attitude within a conversation can often help to demonstrate his attitudes to work of this kind. His profile suggests a considered and deliberate communicator, who will take time to offer his opinions or his responses to questions. Looking out for such behavior can help to confirm his generally thoughtful approach.

Detail and Precision

Concentration and focus are key skills for this job. A successful candidate will need to be capable in a broadly technical sense, with a capacity for managing facts or figures, as well as focusing on matters of detail and complexity.

Michael's profile shows the kind of attention to detail and structured approach that are needed to perform successfully as a Systems Analyst, and it is likely that Michael will match the needs of the role well in terms of his analytical and precise attitude.

Behavioral Questions

The focus of investigation in this area will be on previous roles that involved a broadly 'technical' component, in which the accuracy and reliability of Michael's work was of paramount importance.

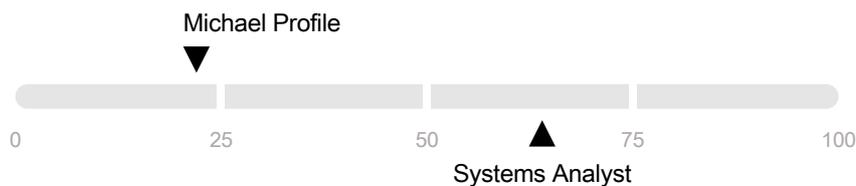

Where practical, it will help to confirm Michael's attitudes in such areas by using questions that concentrate on detailed information. The degree to which Michael is able to respond to these questions will illustrate how he is likely to approach this area of the role.

Job Requirements 2

Adaptation Needs

These are elements of the role where Michael's profile diverges most strongly from the ideal working style. These are areas in which Michael will need to show the potential to adapt his own approach if he is to succeed in the role.

Combining Leadership and Support

Systems Analyst is not in general a challenging role, but there are likely to be times when a more demanding or decisive attitude will be needed, and a successful candidate will need to be ready to show a more assertive and direct approach when such situations arise.

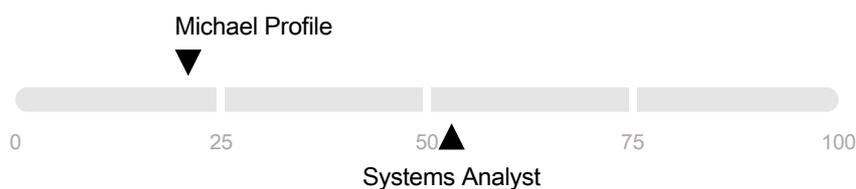

Michael is not a naturally assertive or direct type of person, and he may have some difficulties with the more challenging elements of the job, so that he may find it difficult to come to terms with the adaptations needs to fulfill this role.

Behavioral Questions

A significant question in this context is whether Michael will feel capable of taking on the more demanding aspects of the role that might arise, and so investigating any situations in his past experience where he has taken an assertive stand will provide useful information.

Given his profile, it is not likely that Michael has taken on a significant leadership role in the past, but investigating hypothetical decision-making scenarios may help to establish his potential for adapting to the role.

Responsiveness to Others

This is a role that might intermittently present unforeseen challenges and need a candidate to respond with appropriate urgency. The job might also comprise less active periods, in which a more patient approach will be an asset in a candidate's approach.

Michael's emphasis with regard to this role will be on the patient side of its requirements. Michael will typically be rather less suited to the urgent side of the role's work, and will find it difficult to adapt to the more challenging aspects of a Systems Analyst role.

Behavioral Questions

Michael is potentially rather more patient and accepting in style than will be ideal for the role of Systems Analyst, and this will be an area that merits further investigation.

In particular, it will be informative to assess situations from Michael's previous experience that demanded direct or urgent action, and the approach used by Michael in dealing with those situations. Specifically, whether he was able to address such issues using his own resources, or preferred to employ a less direct strategy to resolve potential problems.

Job Match: Systems Analyst

Job Summary

An effective Systems Analyst will need to combine an analytical approach to their work with a level of control and management, to help ensure that their plans and analyzes are put into action. The ideal candidate for this type of role will have a relatively formal approach to their work, concerning themselves with ensuring the quality and accuracy of the results they produce.

Planning and Analyzing

An analytical, problem-solving approach will be valuable in a candidate for the role of Systems Analyst. An ability to design a solution, and to plan an effective means of implementation for that solution, will be valuable assets in this role. However, a more practical view may also be need at times, and a willingness to adapt plans and designs to meet new developments will also be an important feature of a Systems Analyst's role.

Formality and Organization

The role of Systems Analyst will need a candidate who is comfortable with formality and structure, and who understands the need to ensure that work conforms to established requirements and parameters. The role requires a relatively direct and assertive type of individual who will not only work within these parameters themselves, but also ensure that others comply with these specified needs.

Controlling and Managing

Though formal planning and an analytical approach are important features of a Systems Analyst's role, a more controlling approach is also a highly relevant feature of the job. A candidate for this position will have to be ready to take direct and decisive action to ensure that plans are put into operation, and carried out correctly. At times this may involve taking unpopular actions or confronting challenges directly: a Systems Analyst will need to be ready to address situations of this kind if they develop.
